The Franklin County Courthouse located at Ottawa is a rectangular Romanesque-influenced structure with entrances on the east and west sides. The building is three stories in height and has a full basement. The basement foundation walls, which are constructed of rough-hewn limestone blocks laid in regular horizontal courses, terminate at the first floor line in a projecting limestone belt course. Red face brick is the principal building material used for wall construction on the three stories above the stone belt line. The roof form is very complex but is basically a steep pitched hip roof with intersecting gables at the center of each of the four sides. A steeply pitched hip roof is used over each of the four corner towers. Two cupolas are located at the ends of the main hip roof. The west cupola contains a foursided clock while the east cupola is an open four-sided bell tower. A decorative metal spine is used on all roof ridges. The roof cornice and gable overhangs are ornamented by dentils with a similar decoration on the tower. Each of the tower roofs as well as the two cupolas terminates in a decorative metal spire. A silvered statue stands on the apex of the gable over the west entrance. In addition to the roof features and the corner towers, the building has large entrance porches at the east and west facades. The porch roofs, which are supported by large brick pillars with stone bases, capitals and intermediate bands, are balconies for the second floor. First floor windows are simple rectangular openings with stone sills and lintels. stone of the lintels is extended continuously around the building to form a band. The same is true for the sills of the second story windows. Second story windows are capped with large semicircular stone arches, which interconnect to provide a continuous stone band.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Franklin County Courthouse in Ottawa was designed by a local architect, George P. Washburn, one of the state's most prominent early architects.

After a county seat controversy which began in 1858, Ottawa was chosen the permanent county seat on August 1, 1864. The courthouse square was purchased by the board of county commissioners from the Ottawa Town Company on March 17, 1865, for $1,180. Although a jail was erected on the square in 1865, county offices were housed in various private business buildings until 1893. (The old jail was replaced by the present facility in 1906.)

Efforts to obtain a permanent structure for county offices began in 1884 but were unsuccessful until 1891. The state legislature of 1891 authorized the Franklin county commissioners to levy a tax not to exceed three mills for the construction of a courthouse, providing both the proposition to build a courthouse and the maximum cost of $50,000 were approved in an election by a majority of the voters. In a special election on April 21, 1891, the question of building a courthouse carried by a vote of 1,917 to 1,106 and the maximum cost was favored by 1,963 to 1,102.

On December 30, 1891, the contract for constructing the courthouse was awarded to L. W. Divelbiss of Olathe for $45,940. Sub-contracts were let to S. Reidy of Ottawa for the stone work, J. Jeffries and Company of Ottawa for the mill work, William Broderick of Ottawa for the painting and finishing work, A. P. Elder of Ottawa for the plumbing and heating apparatus and George Abbott of Olathe for the plastering. Architect Washburn was also the superintendent of the construction activity. According to a statement furnished by the county commissioners the total expenditure for the building was $49,014.6%. Presumably to stay inside the $50,000 maximum cost, the report listed separately the costs of heating, plumbing, gas and electrical fixtures, furniture, filling and grading and the architect's fees. These items were listed at $17,924.56; so with some bills yet unpaid the total expenditure for the new courthouse stood at $66,939.25, when county officials moved into the new building in late September, 1893. Dedication ceremonies were held October 3, and the courthouse was officially accepted by the commissioners from the contractor on November 11, 1893.

8. The Franklin County Courthouse is regarded as one of the most outstanding works of George P. Washburn, who was one of the best known 19th century Kansas architects. Courthouses were one of Washburn's specialities, and his symmetrical courthouse designs gave unique character to 13 Kansas county seat towns. The Franklin County Courthouse is considered the best-kept example of his utilization of square towers in a courthouse design.
